“ As a young boy in the mid-Fifties, my family lived next door to Faye and her family in the East Lake section of Chattanooga. We were always in and out of each other’s homes, playing games together. She was like a big sister to my sister Kay and me. On a regular basis, the East Lake community center would show horror movies like “Creature from the Black Lagoon.” On the walk home after those movies, the three of us would hold hands and bunch up together dead certain that we would not make it home without being grabbed by a lurking monster. And of course we couldn’t resist trying to make each other scream. We give thanks for her life and for her faith. Rev. A. Roy Medley
