Jerome, from the day you married Jennifer you became a man who thought he had hung the moon. The love and happiness that you and Jennifer shared was contagious and as your little sons were born into your life you both became beacons of light in the love you gave and making people around feel extra special. Your giving spirits and going above and beyond to make people feel special was one of your greatest talents, and when I say your I mean you and Jennifer because you two were no longer 2 separate people but 1 loving unit, so in the days ahead as you struggle to find yourself without Jennifer being there to see and touch, just feel within your heart and know that she is there with you, in your heart, and nothing will ever take that away. Jennifer was so extra special in loving everyone and tried to make everyone's life better by acts of kindness only she could show but Jennifer was tired of fighting pain and suffering and her body was tired and worn out so God called her home to relax and enjoy the joys of Heaven forevermore. Now she is pain free and cheering you on as she watches down from heaven along with your Daddy and Granny and Pappaw, and she knows you can make it as in Heb 12:1, knowing she's there cheering for you and waiting for you so you can be together again enjoying heaven together forever and ever and nevermore part. So in the days ahead and time to follow, rely on God for strength to endure the pain and grief and Holy Spirit will comfort and bring you peace like nothing you have ever witnessed before and look up every now and then and feel Jennifer smiling down upon you cheering you on. I love you dearly and will be here with a listening ear and heartfelt shoulder anytime you need me. Love you all, Betty Chapman
