“ My mom... what can I say? My brother and I probably gave her more grief than she probably deserved, but when you're kids it's part of your job to give your parents a hard time. As I got older and moved away, I didn't quite live up to being the type of person that stays in touch with their family. As I look back, I know I should have called my mom more often and I should have tried to visit her more than I did. I'm thankful that I got to have one more phone conversation with her last Thursday, September 21st. I was starting to make plans to come see her again, but unfortunately I never got a chance to make those plans to spend time with her again so that we could each get on the others' nerves once again.

“ Diane and I were cousins and during our teenage years spent listening to The Beatles. She was always fun to be with. Not as close in our adult years but always sent christmas cards. Sad to know she gone. But, with our Lord now. RIP Diane ...
