“ to me melanie wasn't just a cousin she was a best friend, and my sister. i still remember that when i got to america she was the first person who greeted and a week later on my birthday she made sure all of the family came for my special day she wanted everyone to see me blow out my 6 little candles after that we spent all night together it was just amazing. the biggest thing i regret is that i saw her 2 days before everything happened but i was mad at her and my aunt so i didn't say anything to her that day and she kept trying to talk to me but i just blew her off i was so mad at everyone. before they left to go home she said to me "babygirl, if you wanna talk to anyone about anything just text me or call me" i just ignored that but i never realized that would be the last day i saw her alive and smiling. every single day i cry my eyes out about this cause was such a jerk to her that day and i wish she could forgive me:(....

“ Melanie baby :(just the other day you were telling me that you were sorry you couldn't come to my wedding on the 2nd. I told you it was fine cause I knew that you had work & it was a long drive. Never did I imagine that would be our last conversation 😞 you were the sweetest & most loving person I've probably ever met. Rip sweet love 😞

“ Melanie was one of my church daughters. I watched her grow up through children's choir and then taught her in Youth Sunday School. She was shy but also so loving and kind. I remember speaking with her more recently and being so proud of the confident young woman that she had become. She still had a heart for others and a strong love for Jesus. Maritza and family - I am so very sorry for your loss. I love you all and am praying over your family. ❤️

“ I am so sorry for your loss. Melanie was the sweetest and most caring girl I knew. We used to be very close in high school and a couple years after graduating but had unfortunately lost touch since. I will always cherish the memories we had together ❤️ but wish we could have made many more. I pray that her family and friends get through this tough time. Love you "Money"
